

Chestnut class blog

Chestnut class has had a busy start to the new year.

They are enjoying their topic about the human body and what is going on inside.

For their stunning start, they did a human digestion experiment and looked at the journey of poo (also known by the scientific word, 'stool').

In art, they had a fun project of drawing themselves in the style of Romero Britto.

They have been doing lots of homework such as models of human teeth and healthy meals.

They have also been doing well with their home reading challenge - someone has read three whole books.

They also love their book Demon Dentist by David Walliams which is getting really good.

Come back soon to read another blog.
